This week: a moving novel of love and war, CBS correspondent Jim Axelrod reassesses his life with a marathon, a stunning debut about a man escaping India, prosecutor Marcia Clark delivers a gripping legal thriller, and the international hunt for stolen art.

Twice Born
by Margaret Mazzantini

Mazzantini's international bestseller is a remarkable story of one woman's ability to love and overcome loss.

In this emotional tale, Gemma embarks on a haunting trip from her native Rome to postwar Sarajevo with her 16-year-old son, Pietro, to teach him about the city where he was born and about Diego, his deceased father. Upon their arrival, Sarajevo evokes conflicting memories for Gemma of a devastating four-year war but also of her late husband, whom she met in the city before moving to Italy to marry and have a child. Switching from the present to the past, Gemma recalls the painful period 10 years after their move: heartbroken that she had not yet conceived a child, Gemma and Diego were forced to cope with personal struggles amid political fears, as the violent Bosnian war besieged Yugoslavia. Beautifully rendered, Twice Born is a testament to love's power over hate and the promise of new beginnings.
